Message from the Principal's desk

“Education is not an affair of ‘telling’ and being told, but an active and constructive process”

As parents, your goal should be to nurture your children with care, fostering their growth, confidence and independence. However there are moments when your nurturing can unintentionally be influenced by fears – fear of loss or failure. These fears often steam from past experiences, external incidents or concerns we observe in others. While we may believe that over protectiveness equates to love and safety, it is important to recognize how this mindset can affect your children

When parenting is driven by fear, children may internalize these anxieties as they get implanted deep down and they grow up with doubts, assumptions, judgement and low esteem. In contrast, when we nurture with care and confidence, our purpose become very clear. We focus on guiding our children with values, encouraging their decision making and helping them develop essence of responsibility. By empowering our children, they grow confident in knowing when to speak up, when to flag an issue and how to collaborate for positive outcomes. As parents, you have the power to nurture them in a way that overcomes fear and promotes resilience

The journey becomes much more fulfilling when the message at home and at the school, work in harmony to support a child's emotional and mental growth. By reflecting on how we nurture our children, we can ensure that we are building a foundation of care, love and empowerment that helps them thrive in a world of possibilities.
